HANDS UP!

An Incident of Stage-Travelling in Colorado.

From the Chicago Tribune.

Catch a rat in a trap and he will fight. Trap a man, and—well you can't rely on him. It is according to the trap. In the heavy stage coach, as we roll out of Leadville, says a frontier letter, are seven men. One is an army officer who has half a dozen scars to prove his bravery. Cut off from his command on the plains last summer by a score of Indians, he entrenched himself and fought the band off until he arrived. Two of the others are desperadoes who have killed their men. Three of the others are stalwart miners, each armed with two revolvers, and they look as if they would prove ugly customers in a fight.

The seventh man might do some shooting on a pinch, but he hopes there will be no pinch. In the crowd are ten revolvers, two derringers, three repeating rifles, and four or five bowie knives, and there is a perfect good feeling as the stage rolls on. It is tacitly understood that the army captain is to assume command if the coach is attacked, and that all are to keep cool and fire to kill.

It is 10 o'clock in the morning. The windows are down and the passengers are smoking and talking and seeking for comfortable positions. The coach has just reached the top of a hill, when every horse is suddenly pulled up.

"If it's a b'ar we'll have some fun," growled one of the miners, as he put his head out the window.

"It's a robber, gin me the fast pop at him," whispered one of the desperadoes.

No one could say what the trouble was, when a wiry little chap, about five feet six inches tall, with black eyes and hair, clean face and thin lips, appeared at the left-hand door, with a cocked revolver in either hand, and said:

"Gents, I'm sorry to disturb you, but I've got to make a raise this morning. Please leave your shooters and embark down here, one at a time!"

It was sudden. So sudden that it took ten seconds to understand the drift of his remarks. Then every eye was turned to the right-hand door, and two revolvers held by another robber were seen at the open window. It was a trap. The rats were caught, and would they fight?

"Gents, I'm growing a little impatient," said the first robber, and I want to see the procession begin to move."

Let's see. The captain was to lead us, and we were to be cool and fire to kill. But the captain was growing white around the mouth, and so one had a weapon in hand. The rats were not going to fight. One of the miners opened the door and descended, and the other six humbly followed. The seven were drawn up in line across the road, and while the robber held his shooter on the line, he coolly observed to his partner:

"Now, William, you remove the weapons from the coach, and then search these gentlemen."

As William obeyed, every victim was ordered to hold his hands above his head, and whatever plunder was taken from his pockets was dropped into William's hat. Four gold watches, two diamond pins, telescope, a diamond ring, a gold badge, and $1.200 in cash changed hands in ten minutes. Not a man had a word to say. The driver of the coach did not leave his seat, and was not interfered with. When the last man had been plundered the gentle Dick Turpin kindly observed:

"You are the most decent set of men I ever robbed, and if times weren't so blasted hard, I'd make each of you a present of $10. Now, then, climb back to your places and the coach will go on."

The crowd "climb," and the vehicle resumed its journey. Not a weapon or a time-piece or a dollar had been saved. Seven well-armed men had been cleaned out by two, and not a shot fired or a wound given. Each man took his seat without a word. Mile after mile was passed over in silence, and finally the seventh man—the one who might fight on a pinch, but didn't—plaintively suggested:

"Can't some of you gentlemen think of a few remarks which would be appropriate to the occasion?"

No one could, and the silence was renewed.

The Winter in Montana.

This has been a hard winter indeed for settlers in the Northwest. The starvation and freezing of cattle in Montana have caused, it is said, a loss of about 20 per cent. Hay has not been obtainable off the main lines of travel at any cost, and the deep snow has made transportation and browsing alike impossible. Hay at $45 a ton in a country where fodder does not usually enter into the expense account of stock raising, makes it sometimes cheaper to kill cattle than to save them. Dakota has also a fuel famine.

A marriage service was in progress at St. John's church, New Orleans. A closely veiled woman with an infant in her arms walked up the center aisle just as the clergyman asked if any one objected to the union. "I do," said the intruder, pulling off her veil, and laying the baby at the feet of the bridegroom. "Here is my child. You are my husband. I am lawfully your wife, and you shall not marry this woman." She made a furious attempt to attack him, but was restrained by the usher, while the bride screamed and fainted. It transpired that the woman was not the man's wife, though he had for years made her believe so by means of a forged certificate.

The Treatment of Frozen Persons.

German physiologists have been experimenting to ascertain the best mode of restoring animal life, and they announce that the hitherto accepted theory that persons who have been exposed too long to extreme cold should not be brought into contact with warmth except very low degrees is wholly erroneous. Dogs were frozen by artificial applications of cold until breathing and pulsation had almost wholly ceased, and then attempts were made to restore twenty in a cold room, twenty in a warm room, and twenty in a bath of warm water. Of the first, fourteen died; of the second, eight; of the last, none. The warm bath brought about restoration in a remarkable short time.

GROWING GRAPES FROM CACTI.

The Mojave desert in Southern California seems a perfect picture of devil-made desolation. All is sand and cacti. The cacti are of many forms; some spreading over the surface of the sand; some appearing as curious looking globes; some rising twenty or thirty feet into the air, in one strange trunk, as big at the top as at the bottom, with branches shooting straight out and then growing directly upward, no larger at their extremities than where they leave the trunk. Fancy these last weird forms of vegetation without a twig or leaf, their few stout limbs bent upward like siphons, the tops of the trunks surmounted by a bunch of bayonet-shaped green blades, and you have the yucca, the candelabra of the desert. Far as the eye can see over the Mojave desert, these caricatures of trees, like palms deformed, lift their crown of spears against the blazing sky. Once seen they can never be forgotten. They seem to embody the forlorn hopes of vegetation; springing as they do from the burning sand, and in the midst of desolation. Yet cacti, though growing only from arid soil, have always succulent, fleshy stems and trunks, and the traveler on the desert sometimes finds sufficient moisture in them to appease his thirst.

It appears that a remarkable discovery has been made on the Mojave desert, which may result in a grand transformation of the wilderness of cacti into fruitful vineyards. It has been found that grape cuttings can be successfully grafted on the cactus, the moisture of the latter furnishing all that is needed for the growth and productiveness of the vine. The story, as it comes, through the medium of an exchange, and we know not on what authority, is as follows:

"It has been found that grape-cuttings inserted in the trunks of the cacti on the desert grow and thrive as vigorously as in cultivated land. This fact is of great importance to the people. By the use of a chisel a man can plant a large vineyard in a day, and the vine so planted will climb the cactus and grow luxuriously without cultivation or irrigation. The dry, hot sands of the desert will afford a fine place for drying raisins. In addition to grapes, it has been proved that melons, cucumbers and tomatoes will grow from cactus stock, so that the desert may soon bloom like the rose."

Now let some genius try grafting goose feathers on the sagebrush, and see if it will not be possible to raise geese ready stuffed for the table with sage and onions.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The extent of the opium vice in China may be estimated by these figures: "The total value of imports into China in 1879 was $14,350,000, of which $1,000,000, or nearly one-half, was contributed by opium alone, the increase in quantity over the previous year being nearly 1,500,000 pounds. The value of opium imported exceeded the value of tea exported by $5,000,000, and the value of silk exported by $10,000,000."

The French word 'nee,' so commonly used in 'society persons' by esteemed contemporaries, means simply 'born,' being the past participle of the verb 'naître,' 'to be born.' The English word 'born' is therefore to be preferred in English composition to the French word 'nee,' the meaning being the same. George Eliot, in "Middlemarch," speaks of "Casaubon, born Brooks."

The Homer Mining Index makes light of Boomer's title to the land on which the town of Lundy stands. The story of the attachment of the town site by one of Boomer's creditors was true, however. Yet, between attaching the town site and getting possession of the town there is a dam site of difference, the water privilege of Mill Creek having no doubt to be considered.

Senator Fair has been made a member of the Senate Committee on Mines and Mining, Public Lands and Railroads. In the Committee on Mines and Mining he can be of great service, but as a member of the Committee on Railroads he will not be likely to do the corporations any harm.

JOTTINGS.

Hall & Linderman have fresh vegetables every day.

McPherson Post, G. A. R., has disbanded. Just as well.

Allen has a large lot of embossed pictures, for decorating fancy work.

Mrs. Hobart's house and lot across the river are for sale by I. B. Peck.

Knust is now giving everybody a chance to get a good gold pen at cost.

The Reform Club dances have been discontinued—a reform of some value.

Alterations are being made in the County Clerk's office, as ordered by the Commissioners.

Allen's moulding is disappearing. A gentleman called this morning and asked what a frame 12x14 would cost, and was told 65 cents.

Goegel has designed a new scarf pin, in the form of a candlestick containing a white enamelled candle with a diamond flame. He is having some made to add to his fine stock of jewelry.

Flat was no name for the condition of the stock market this morning. Ophir sold at 8:30, Mexican 4.90, Jacket 2½, Union 7½, and other stocks in proportion. Are stocks about to withdraw into their hole and then dispose of the office by involution?

A clerical error in transcribing the proceedings of the Board of Commissioners, made it appear that they had ordered Fifth street to be opened from West to Chestnut. The order was that it be opened from West to Sierra.

One of the leading features at the Reno Athletic Club meeting this evening will be a contest in a walking and running match, after the regular class exercises. A number of the members have been in active training for some time. The public may soon look for another exhibition.

The Gazette drew a prize to-day. Allen laid one of the "Great American Stationery Packages," price 25 cents, on the editorial table. The package prospected well. It consisted of 18 neat envelopes, 18 sheets extra note paper, 1 pen, 1 lead pencil, 1 good pen holder and a prize of a lady'sshawl pin. How such a lot of goods could be sold for two bits is a puzzle.

A FISH QUESTION.

MINNOWS FOR BAITS.

A New Device for Catching Them That is Highly Recommended.

Fish Commissioner B. B. Redding, of California, whose piscatorial zeal would almost induce him to dive after a strange fish anywhere, notes what the GAZETTE has published concerning the coonooie of Pyramid Lake, and writes as follows:

"The GAZETTE is mistaken in saying that the coonooie of Pyramid lake has not been described. I obtained a specimen in 1869 and sent it to the Academy of Sciences, and it was described by Dr. Ayers. It is a Catostomus (sucker), what particular catostomus I have forgotten. It therefore has an English name—Pyramid Lake sucker. I have no doubt there are other fish in Pyramid Lake that have not been described, and if I could get specimens I would have them described, if new to science."

Old residents say that the coonooie is an entirely different fish from the sucker. It is said that the coonooies commence running up the rivers from the lake about the time that the willows put forth leaves in the spring. The fish never come up higher than Wadsworth. When they first come into the river they are plump and good to eat, but after a few weeks, having spawned, they become emaciated and unfit for food. Many of them die after spawning, and the banks of the river below Wadsworth have been known to be lined with dead coonooies, which tainted the air with their decay. The flesh of the fish is similar in fibre to that of the salmon, and it also resembles the salmon in the peculiarities above described. Coonooie is said to be Indian for buffalo, or cow, fish.

Railroad Matters.

The impatience of western people is only equalled by the conservatism of their eastern brethren.

It seems a long time to the people of Reno since the Nevada & Oregon railroad was first talked of, and the delays which have ensued have seemed to them to be almost fatal. The general public knows very little of the immense amount of work necessary before any real start is possible. There are large interests to protect and hostile elements to conciliate before they can be assimilated to form an effective company. A house divided against itself cannot stand, and all parts of a corporation must be in harmony. The Capital has been convulsed all this week over the marriage of a widow, fair and forty, and a popular saloon keeper. On Monday the fair bride was driven around town in a coach and four to call upon her acquaintances and invite them to the wedding. On Tuesday the creditors of the bridegroom-elect put an attachment on his saloon and fixtures and closed him up. The same day the bride's property to the amount of several hundred dollars was attached. The constant couple, however, flew to each other's arms for consolation, and were married amid the flash of diamonds and the flow of champagne. The papers gave long accounts of the brilliant dresses, etc.

PERSONAL.

Rescued From Death.

William J. Conighlin, of Somerville, Mass., says: In the fall of 1878 I was taken with BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh, and was confined to the Hospital. The doctor said I had a noise in my left lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, got both bottles when to my surprise, commented to see how good they were. I live longer than for three years past.

I write this hoping every one afflicted with Disease Lungs will take DR. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED.

It is said it is one more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my

CHRONIC LAUGHERS.

A Whole Family in New Jersey Subject to Fits of Uncontrollable Laughter.

A preposterous story originates in Frenchtown, N. J., of a farmer and his family of sons and daughters who live near by. They are chronic sufferers, and, when the fit is on them, can no more restrain their cackhinnation than a well-regulated clock can keep from ticking. This unfortunate and grotesque malady attacked the father first about ten years ago, and since then all the other members of the family have successively seen the joke and begun to laugh. These spells occur twice a day, and leave the family a little exhausted, possibly, but in no other respect the worse for wear. The neighbors have become accustomed to the thing, and think nothing of seeing their old friends going about their daily avocations in a roar of laughter. Charles, the eldest son, who had held out against the infection for years, and entertained reasonable hopes that he alone should escape, had the mortification to undergo his first attack while in the very act of proposing for the hand of a Harrisburg girl. He had succeeded in conveying to the young lady an idea of the state of his heart, but had not yet arrived at that point where even smiles were in order, when he burst into immoderate laughing, which so frightened the object of his devotion that she fled from the room. She subsequently listened to an explanation, however, and is now a member of the family circle. Several grandchildren are now in existence, all of whom, with a single exception, inherit the malady.

Twins With One Body But Two Minds.

Vienna physicians have been examining with much interest a three-year-old pair of twins, who are not less of a natural curiosity than the Siamese twins were. From the breast bone down they have but one body; above that they are two wholly separate and complete organisms. They have only two legs and feet, but four arms. The sense of feeling in the two upper parts is entirely distinct and individual. At the moment of medical inspection, one of the heads looked peevish and occasionally cried on account of a painful tooth, while the other looked fresh and lively, and shouted "Mamma!" The inner arms come in conflict, and cause fights between the twins. Though the pair have one body below the breast, they do not get hungry at the same time. The left foot seems to be connected only with the left hand, and the right foot with the right hand. One of the feet was pinched, and only the head on that side cried out.

Unfit to Father His Wife's Children.

James Jameson of Chicago granted a divorce to a wife on the ground of habitual drunkenness in her husband, though the evidence showed that he was no more than a very moderate tippler. "Is he fit," his Honor argued in his remarkable decision, "to be the father of his wife's children? The greatest cruelty that can possibly be inflicted upon a woman is to make her the mother of children likely to become drunkards. The Legislature would be justified in providing that, where a man has so indulged in drink as to have tainted his blood and thus made it probable that his offspring will take by inheritance a tendency to vicious courses, that fact alone should be good ground for divorce, although he may in all other cases be a kind, indulgent husband, able and willing to give his wife an abundant support."

Curious Story of a Baby.

Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Dean of Logansport, Ind., had a remarkably pretty and bright baby. The agent of a travelling theatrical company saw it, and hired the mother, at $20 a week and expenses, to let it be used as the infant in a play. After several months Mrs. Dean and the child arrived at Logansport on their tour. Mr. Dean went to the railroad station and asked his wife to retire from the show business. It was folly, he said, considering that he was a prosperous butcher, and the $20 a week was no great object, to divide the family any longer. Mrs. Dean was fond of exhibiting her baby to admiring audiences, and would not consent to stop. Argument proving of no avail, the father seized the youngster, had a fight with the manager, and attracted a great crowd, but finally carried off the prize.
